

Sweden's Iron Mines and Forests Seen as Prize in Scandinavian War

By FREDERICK GARDNER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK—The iron mines and forests of Sweden, important suppliers of vital raw material to a big sector of the world's manufacturers, are seen by Wall Street as the great economic prize at stake in the war in Scandinavia.

The iron ores, mostly north of the polar circle, are the richest in Europe. The Kiruna surface-mined deposit yields 55 to 71 per cent iron.

Pine stands of pine and spruce make pulp for explosives, chemicals, rayon and other artificial fibers.

Cut off from the world's markets by the Allied blockade, the German war machine depends partly on Swedish iron and wood products.

If Germany succeeds in tightening her grip on Sweden, either by invasion or control of Scandinavian trade by way of Denmark and southern Norway, it appears Swedish resources will play a larger role in the outcome of the war.

Great Britain has shared with Germany the flow of high-grade iron ore from the snow-bound mines of the north. Likewise Britain, along with Germany and the United States, has taken a substantial part of Scandinavian pulp and paper exports.

But the Allies, presumably, can replace losses of imports from the northern countries by increased purchases in the vast British and French empires, the United States and other distant markets.

To war observers who stress the economic factors as the keys to military strategy, Swedish mineral resources, more than any other single determinant, explain why Adolf Hitler is gambling for a hold in Scandinavia.

The Norse states were able to stay neutral in the World War, trading with both sides. But Swedish iron ore was not so essential to Germany then. Germany had the great Lorraine iron ores, now held by France and Luxembourg.

After the World War, Germany developed her iron trade with Sweden and in 1938 got 41 per cent of her iron ore from that country. Since the war, it appears, Swedish ores have become even more vital to Germany's war machine because French and other import sources have been blocked.

Sweden in recent years has produced from 11,000,000 to 13,000,000 tons of iron ore and sold most of it to Germany and England.

For cannon, tanks, battleships Nazi fighting power to a large extent depends on Sweden's mines, just as Rumanian oil helps keep the war machines operating.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE
Little Miss Fixit

ADELAIDE was so used to being the culprit that she didn't realize it was Brenda who was jamming the household machinery now. Living grew daily more complicated in the old Burnham house.

It was never anything really important that went wrong; nothing that interfered with the men's work or upset their social engagements; nothing, in short, that actually justified them in protesting too strongly or meditating upon changing their boarding place. It was simply that all sorts of trifles robbed their home life of its comfort.

Eric loathed onions; and for four straight evenings practically everything but the dessert was flavored by that vegetable. The first night he was courteous about it, never even mentioning it; the second he was dignified, and ate little dinner. The third the convulsed to call Adelaide's attention to his untouched plate, and when she asked him worriedly if he was ill, he said: "Onions!" in a martyred voice. The fourth night he took his hat and left the house. (And Adelaide had forgotten both that he disliked onions and that they were actively present in at least three of the dishes she was serving!)

Mac presented no Achilles heel where his food was concerned. He ate practically everything. What drove him to helpless fury was having his working tools disturbed. Evening after evening he roamed about the house searching for his softest pencil, his eraser, once even for his portable typewriter. (It was discovered eventually in the broom closet!)

Mac argued, accused, exacted promises from both Adelaide and her handmaiden; and the next evening he might return to find a favorite small ruler missing, and the sheets of copy which had been neatly stacked on his desk so hopelessly mixed that Page One was followed by Page Nine and that by Page Three.

Observing that an inquiring expression was beginning to dawn in Isobel's eyes, Brenda saw to it that one or two minor catastrophes overtook her also: her music was misplaced, her best handkerchief disappeared from its box on her bureau, once she was perilously close to being late while the whole household searched vainly for her car keys.

At the end of eight days of this, Adelaide became aware that all was not well with her household. She tapped apologetically on Brenda's door as soon as the three who were bound cityward had disappeared.

"I don't know what's the matter with me," she began forlornly. "I seem to have lost my grip lately. Everything's going wrong. Eric is so freezingly polite I know either Grendel has cooked something the way he hates it, or she's lost his best studs. Mac told me this morning he'd make his own bed after this, for Grendel to keep out of his room until he got his new layout finished." She put a limp handkerchief to her eyes. "I never was what you might call a terribly good housekeeper, but even I never used to be as bad as this. It's as though everything I touched went wrong."

Without Remorse

The graceless child behind the typewriter eyed her speculatively—and not a breath of remorse blew across her callous young heart. Adelaide had the happy faculty of putting unpleasant things behind her with remarkable celerity. A month from now she would have forgotten this whole week. As for the men, it would do them good to be a little uncomfortable; make 'em appreciate real domesticity when they encountered it. And if Isobel achieved her heart's desire, then Brenda had every intention of mentioning to her recording angel that she deserved several figures placed on the credit side of the ledger.

She said guiltfully: "You need a rest, Adelaide, that's what's the matter. Everyone goes stale on a job that she's worked on too long. Is there any place you could go for a little visit—say a week or ten days?"

Adelaide brightened as she always did at the prospect of going somewhere.

"I could go to my cousin's in Springfield," she said. "Lucy's been after me for years to come and see her and her new house. Or I could go out about 18 miles in the country to stay with a friend of mine that lives there—"

"Springfield," Brenda decided. "You need to get farther away than 18 miles. When can you start?"

"This afternoon!" Adelaide said without hesitation. "I could send a wire to Lucy to say I'm coming. Grendel could press my blue print and I could pack a couple of bags—Brenda!"

"What?" she asked, startled. "I must be out of my mind to think of going away. Who would run this house? Grendel has simply no sense at all. Oh, me! It was nice while it lasted—our plan."

"I'll tell you who'll run the house," the girl informed her. "Isobel. Did you know she has domestic inclination in a big way? Years to plan meals, shop, that sort of thing?"

"Well, yes, I did know it, I think. At least, she's always asking me how to tell the grades of table linen and why do I have rice and macaroni at the same meal; but she's only a girl, Brenda. She's had no actual experience. I don't believe—"

Brenda cut her short. "I do. I think she'd make a grand housekeeper—at least for a week or so. Let's ask her this evening, shall we? If she wants to do it, you'll promise to go to Springfield?"

"Yes, indeed I will," said Adelaide enthusiastically.

Isobel was lured up into Brenda's room soon after the evening meal and the idea presented to her airily. Brenda dwelt on the fatigue from which their landlady was suffering; Adelaide now meekly pointed out how forgetful she was growing because of overwork. Isobel said briskly: "Put it off until next week, Adelaide, and I'll do it with all the pleasure in life. I'll have no lessons to give next week; they're redecorating the studio. That leaves me only the radio work, and I can have the housekeeping all attended to hours before it's time to drive down for that."

"Conscience Hurt"

So it was settled. Brenda was sorry the experiment had to be postponed. She feared her ingenuity might give out if it had to be exercised much longer. Worse than that, she feared discovery, either by Adelaide or Isobel. But Adelaide was far too excited by her forthcoming visit, and Isobel was too deep in cookbooks and texts on domestic science to notice the various small iniquities which were being practised beneath their noses. And on Sunday the rightful landlady of the old Burnham house departed, and a youthful substitute was installed in her place.

Isobel drove Adelaide to the station in her little car. Brenda employed the time while she awaited the other girl's return, in ardent self-reproach.

"Here I am, trying to arrange other people's lives for them again! Little Miss Fixit, always on the job! How do I know whether Isobel can run this house or not? Just because she wants a home of her own, just because she's interested in domestic science, doesn't guarantee her ability to look after those two men and keep 'em satisfied. How'll I feel if Adelaide comes home and finds Mac and Eric both gone—and Isobel probably going too, if she makes a mess of the housekeeping?"

The more she thought about it, the less she could understand her own rashness. Isobel herself had said she had only a theoretical knowledge of housekeeping; and weren't the women always full of jokes about women who had only theories and no experience in running a house?

Eric and Mac were healthy men with good appetites. They lunched lightly, and they dined—and had a right to expect!—a good dinner. What if Isobel offered them a cupful of soup with a dab of whipped cream in it, a slender chop exuberantly arrayed in a fancy frill, a fancy salad out of a magazine?

Her writer's passion for detail made the picture a vivid one: beautifully set table with a low bowl of flowers in the middle, Grendel drilled to unaccustomed perfection of service, Isobel neat and attractive in a pretty gown, and—teashop ration for two hungry men!

Brenda was pacing worriedly back and forth across her room when a tap came at her door. Before she could open it, Mac stuck his head in.

"I knew it was all right," he explained, "because I've been listening to that sentry-go of yours for twenty minutes. Conscience hurt you?"

"What do you mean, Mac?" He grinned. "I'm on to you, young woman! Adelaide and Grendel in their time have done some mighty queer things, but never even to them did it occur to put my typewriter in the broom closet! I knew whom I had to thank for that fancy touch. What's the big idea, Brenda?"

Her hands went up to her burning cheeks. So Mac had known all this time! He had realized that she had slipped into his room and hidden his pencils, had given an all too realistic imitation of a mischievous child of four. "I—I had a reason," she faltered.

"I know you did," he assured her warmly.

Ohio Hens Have Own Social Register; Must Be Good To Get in Blue Book

50 Hatcheries Cooperating in Keeping Laying Records of Hens; Benefits of Plan Cited.

COLUMBUS, O. — Ohio has a record of old hens which can be traced back to the social register of the Ohio Poultry Association. This is because these Ohio biddies are included in a registry of performance that guarantees their quality as well as their longevity.

Owners of these hens do not get in Ohio's poultry blue book until they are hatched but must first trap nest records show they have laid 200 or more eggs in one year. G. S. Vickers, Columbus field man for the Ohio Poultry Improvement Association, says that hens of the best registry of performance hens can get the book on a basis of appearance.

Mr. Vickers says the poultrymen's method of checking eligibility for several advantages over the social register for human beings. For one thing, the death rate for Ohio hatchery chicks in 1934 was 15 out of each 100 in the first two weeks of life. Reports on registry of performance chicks in 1934 fix the death rate at four out of each 100 in three weeks.

Ohio was one of the first states in establishing a method of registering the egg-laying ability of hens in breeding flocks and has been a leader in the national development of that plan. The first year of the improvement program, 32 Ohio hatcheries with a capacity of 2,500,000 eggs cooperated. This year, 89 hatcheries that can incubate 5,500,000 eggs are using the plan.

The improvement association field man says buyers realize the advantages of having egg-laying and health records back of the

Large Supply of Protein Not Needed by Growing Pullets, Experiments Show

WOOSTER, O.—Results of a recent test conducted at the Ohio agricultural experiment station indicate that the protein requirement of growing pullets is not so high as generally supposed, says P. R. Record of the station's animal industry department.

In studying the protein requirements of growing pullets it was found that birds receiving a ration containing 5 per cent of an animal protein supplement grew as rapidly and came into production at approximately the same age as those that received a ration containing 10 or 15 per cent of the protein supplement.

These results, which were obtained with birds raised in confinement and with birds which had access to a good bluegrass range, indicate that heavy grain feeding of pullets during the growing period will not materially retard development and will reduce the cost of raising pullets.

When the ration contained no animal protein supplement, the birds grew more slowly, requiring a considerably longer time to come into production. In this group, the birds raised on range developed faster than those confined. The

RASPBERRY PLANTS NEED SUNLIGHT, VENTILATION

By International News Service
COLUMBUS, O.—Sunlight and ventilation are recommended as factors in preventing raspberry diseases by C. C. Allison, specialist in plant pathology, Ohio State University.

Raspberries which are permitted to become matted bramble thickets retain dew and rain and furnish ideal conditions for the spread of anthracnose, a fungus disease that kills raspberry vines, Allison said.

He recommends selecting disease-free stock for planting and setting the plants where there is good air and water drainage.

FOLIAGE IMPORTANT

The flowers of shrubs are less important in the permanent landscape effect than the foliage, says Horace F. Major of the University of Missouri. At most, the flowers of the best shrubs last for 10 to 15 days, so it is important to select those varieties that will succeed each other in time of bloom. In this way there will always be something blooming somewhere in the yard. Perennial flowers placed in front of shrubs will often fill in the time between shrub bloom.

PITCHFORK-FISHING IN COLORADO

A freak wind blew the waters of Lake Meredith a half-mile inland near Sugar City, Colo., and in with the wind went several million fish, which were left high and dry when the lake went back where it came from. Farmers in the vicinity are using the fish, estimated at 30 freight carloads, for fertilizer, as shown.

USE OF LEAD ARSENATE FOR SPRAYING EXPLAINED

Poison Gives Good Control of Fruit Canker Worms.

WOOSTER, O.—Ordinary, lead arsenate is not needed in the apple orchard until the petal-fall spray. If cankerworms or plum curculio adults are abundant, however, it should be used in the spray that is applied when the blossoms are in the full-pink stage. Three pounds of the poison should be added to each 100 gallons of spray liquid.

C. R. Culright, associate entomologist of the Ohio agricultural experiment station, has observed that cankerworms are most likely to be found in orchards which have been carelessly sprayed the year before or are adjacent to infested orchards or woodlands. Orchards that annually receive the full schedule of sprays are rarely damaged.

SUCCESSFUL WAR IN U. S.

Cleanup Is Made on Destructive Western Jackrabbits.

By The Associated Press
PIERRE, S. D.—Churches, volunteer firemen, American Legion posts and other organizations report they waged successful war during the winter on jackrabbits which had been destroying young trees in the vast shelter belt plantings of South Dakota.

Two hundred and fifty community rabbit hunts were staged. The total bag was 58,893 jackrabbits, 87 foxes and 21 coyotes. The Forest Service reported 1,818,800 acres were systematically combed by 16,000 hunters, who cut the rabbit population to less than 23 per square mile. It was 56 per square mile in 1935.

The Forest Service furnished the shotgun ammunition. The $8,000 in proceeds from sale of the rabbits went to charity. The rabbits brought as high as 21 cents each.

CATCHING UP

FREMONT, O.—Lyle Craig, poultry and feed man of nearby Green Springs, explained his idea of a champion egg layer with this story: Robert Egbert brought him a hen which didn't seem to lay its share of eggs. While in Craig's care, during one 15-minute period the hen laid three eggs.

TESTS SHOW FERTILIZING OF CORN IS PROFITABLE

In seven-year average corn fertilizer experiments at the Ohio Experiment Station at Wooster, 100 pounds of 2-12-6 fertilizer has given an increased yield of 18.5 bushels to the acre where no manure was applied to the land. Where eight tons of manure were applied to the land, 100 pounds of this fertilizer increased the yield 10.1 bushels.

Two hundred pounds of 2-12-6 did not increase the yield any more than did 100 pounds of 2-12-6. In some other experiments the use of 0-14-6 fertilizer gave practically as good an increase as did the use of 2-12-6. On soils that were highly fertile the 0-14-6 gave just as good results, while on less fertile soils the 2-11-6 gave slightly better results.

35 Farm Families Solve Problems by Pooling Interests

By International News Service
VINCENNES, Ind. — Thirty-five families representing a cross-section of the low-income rural families of southern Indiana are working out a new life on the farm security administration's "Deehee Farms, Inc." near Vincennes.

Once "ill-housed, ill-fed and ill-clothed," they now have modern homes, land to cultivate, adequate farming equipment, food, clothing and schools for their children.

The project is a co-operative venture.

The government purchased the land, built homes and provided capital for the undertaking. The 35 families pooled their farming interests to benefit from the possibilities of large-scale farming and now rent the land for $6,000 a year.

HEAVY APRIL RAINS DELAY CROPS IN OHIO

Planting Put Back 3 Weeks, Fall Frost Dangerous.

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., April 27—Extensive April rainfall, nearing a threatening to set Ohio's crops back at least three weeks and place farmers in jeopardy of heavy losses from fall frosts.

That was the belief expressed here by state agricultural department officials whose observers have been touring southern and central Ohio to view the setback from rains and floods.

The corn crop especially would be affected by early frost, said officials. Other crops such as wheat, alfalfa, oats, barley and soy beans would not be hit materially by a shorter growing season.

Planting will be at least three weeks late this spring, department observers reported, because there still is a "tremendous amount of plowing to be done." Planting normally is nearly finished by May 1, they said.

Weather bureau officials, awaiting final statewide reports, indicated that rainfall this month already was crowding the April record of 6.37 inches set in 1903 and predicted more rain before May. The April average is 3.17 inches.

Although wet weather hampered and frost caused slight damage last week to cherry, peach, and early apple crops in southern Ohio, the fruit crop—except for peaches—should be good, department reports said.

AAA Set To Pay Indemnities for Flood Damage

Marion county farmers were notified today that indemnities on flood-damaged wheat insured under the AAA wheat crop insurance plan will be paid as soon as verification of the loss is made by the county AAA committee.

The announcement was made by C. P. Harper, committee chairman, who said that farmers who suffered a total loss should request inspection of the crop. If the inspection shows the crop to be a total or "substantially total" loss, the farmer may immediately file a claim for an indemnity and obtain permission to put the insured acreage to other use.

Full amount of the insurance in wheat or cash equivalent will be paid for total losses. Partial losses will be paid after harvest when the extent of the actual damage can be determined.

Mr. Harper pointed out that farmers may use a "deferred settlement" plan of claiming losses. "If a grower wishes to postpone payment of the indemnity, as he might in time of a rising market, he may ask for a deferred settlement with the privilege of requesting payment within 90 days," Mr. Harper said.

In such cases the cash equivalent of the indemnity will be figured on the basis of the price in effect on the day the notice is received by the federal crop insurance corporation at its branch office.

Think far only a few calls from farmers on flood damage have been received, indicating that probably most farmers will continue to cultivate their wheat and have the loss figured at the harvest.

DYNAMITE AN IMPORTANT AGENT IN MAN'S SERVICE

Even today dynamite is more useful in peace than in war but in spite of modern manufacturing methods the material still needs to be treated with skill and caution, warns George Amundson, engineer, Michigan State College.

"It's likely that about 15,000 acres are being straightened out annually by removing stumps and large rocks with the use of dynamite," he says. "The younger generation is not familiar with the use, handling and results possible with dynamite. It is an art we ought to retain."

Dynamite helps dig ditches for draining wet spots. The explosive breaks up stumps and stones in cultivated fields or aids in clearing out over land for more livable sized farms.

An Honor Well Placed

AMONG Marion's noteworthy events of the week now closing was formal recognition of one of our favorite teachers as the community's No. 1 woman citizen. The editorial "our" is used but the expression is actually that of an individual, for the writer is one of the hundreds of former pupils of Miss Louise Cunningham, all of whom have happy memories of their days in school under her guidance and supervision. If a vote could be taken among these hundreds—possibly we should say thousands—we believe that beyond question it would be unanimous in approving the selection of Miss Cunningham for the citizenship honor conferred by community organizations this week.

For Miss Cunningham was more than a teacher, as that role of service is generally considered.
 She was a sincere friend of every boy and girl in her classes, never limiting her attention to them as a group but always taking a solicitous interest in them individually. Earnest and enthusiastic in her work, she imparted that spirit to her pupils and thus her class room sessions were invariably congenial and profitable. She gave praise where it was due and was always patient and considerate with those who lacked brilliance and were a bit slow to learn.

This personal interest of the teacher in the welfare of her pupils and their affection for her did not cease when association in school ended. She meets them as old friends, exchanges reminiscences of school days and hours how they have been getting along with life's problems.

For example, we have a friend who was in our graduating class at High school 38 years ago. He is a successful business man in a city 1,200 miles from Marion and travels back this way occasionally for a visit. One of the first on his calling list here is Miss Cunningham and his meeting with her is among the happiest reunions of his return to the old home town.

The ideal teacher is, in fact, personified in Miss Cunningham. Her record and the personal qualities which made that record possible might well be used as a guide and source of inspiration for any man or woman aspiring to success in the teaching profession. To do this, however, it is essential to bear in mind that to reach the high standard of Miss Cunningham's achievement something besides a college degree is required.
 There must be her enthusiasm for the work and her personal interest in each boy and girl, linked with her teaching ability, to assure a "favorite teacher" rating.

George Whysall

GEORGE WHYSALL, to whom death came suddenly this week, was a leader in business and industry during a period marked by important changes in those important fields. He was a pioneer in some of these developments.

When he came to Marion as one of the founders of the interurban railway service in this section of Ohio, that system of transportation was reaching its peak. Previous to that he had performed important work in laying out and in-stallating natural gas systems in cities of Ohio and neighboring states and did it so successfully that he won recognition as one of the most competent men in public utility development.

As a citizen of Marion he was prominent not only in his chosen career of public utility management but also in civic affairs. He never turned a deaf ear to a call for service in any community undertaking and his counsel and judgment were always valuable.

Nor did he hold back when asked to perform services likely to be unpleasant and onerous. He was put to this test during the World war when the time came to place restrictions on the use of necessary commodities in order that the nation might be assured all the supplies needed for its part in achieving victory for its soldiers. He accepted appointment as fuel administrator for Marion county, served until the war emergency was past, and did an excellent job. There were times that the public was inclined toward resentment against fuel limitations, but under Mr.
 Whysall's able and firm direction the situation was always admirably handled and Marion did its duty in helping safeguard the nation's welfare without causing serious difficulties or discomfort to people of the community.

This public service stands as a mark of distinction in Mr. Whysall's record of citizenship in Marion.

THE GADABOUT

The Acheson County Mail thought it had a dandy name for the new Burlington Zephyr.
 Considering the enormous mileage traveled by the train, the newspaper suggested it be called "The Eleanora."—Kansas City Times.

WHAT A RELIEF

A brilliant display of the aurora borealis in Bulgaria must have been doubly welcome, since almost any other manifestation in the Balkans these days is suggestive of unpleasant political pressure from one side or the other.—New York Sun.

THE FORGOTTEN MAN

The "forgotten man" today seems to be the man who is struggling to keep in business and provide jobs for others, against obstacles created for him in Washington.—Detroit Free Press.

News Behind the News

Roosevelt Believed Preparing Stronger Statement of U. S. Foreign Policy.

By PAUL MALLON

By United Press

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Mr.
 Roosevelt is working up toward a stronger statement of American foreign policy. It will be made in one form or another with the next few weeks, timed to meet expected blows in Europe, such as a German invasion of Sweden or a Russian invasion of Poland.

Diplomatic information that Hitler is gambling his maximum force on ending the war this year has set both the President and his advisers to exploring new lines of policy. In talking the matter over with his counselors the President is reported to have taken the position that the time is coming for the issuance at least of a determined warning that any force which endangers upon the peace and security of the United States will be met by force.

Acceleration of authorized defensive measures may be sponsored.

Who's Winning

The universal carbuncle question "Who is winning the war?" is not being answered these days by eminent professional military authorities here. The higher you go for information the less conviction you will find in responses.
 Certainly no military authority has informed the White House on anyone else that Germany is winning the war as a result of her Norwegian successes. Trustworthy military details are not available inside or out, and if they were the outcome could not be forecast.

Trying to call the result now is like deciding the winner of a baseball game in the second inning while sitting in impenetrable fog on top of the grandstand.

Latin American Ties

At least one thoughtful constructive effort to develop realistic lasting ties with Latin America is being started by this government.

The inter-departmental committee on American cooperation is trying to get a philanthropic foundation to contribute capital for a tropical institute of agriculture which would start turning South American farming back into tropical lines to produce the raw materials we need instead of those in which we have a surplus.

Hubber, for instance, originated in Brazil, but now she has turned to cotton while U. S. rubber comes from the East Indies. Troub-some questions of plant disease, organization and capital stand in the way of Brazilian return to rubber, but these can be conquered. Ford and Firestone experimental stations in Latin America are making progress toward creating disease resistant plants with higher yields per acre. Cultivation of two million acres would be required to meet United States needs today.

The same situation is fundamentally true of quinine, hemp, and some other products.
 Five and ten years might be required to get the movement producing actual results, but it would be worth 25 to 50 years work if it offered a way to break the existing commercial deadlock.

The work is in charge of Earl W. Bressman, representative of Agriculture Secretary Wallace on the government committee.

Gibraltar

Gibraltar, great rocky fortress which has been used in life insurance advertisements and otherwise as the symbol of impenetrable security, may be impenetrable no longer.

Sharp eyes which have inspected this Mediterranean nose on the now squirming Mussolini believe it secure against assault by sea but not necessarily by land.
 The small amount of room available there has prevented the British from setting up anything like the heavy defenses of the Maginot line.

This raises the question of Spanish intentions, and there are reports Mussolini has been at work actively upon his old friend, General Franco, to see what can be done. At the outset of the war, Franco let it be known he was not interested, but if Hitler starts gelling the upper hand in the north, Franco is another prospective candidate for the bandwagon.

Senate campaign investigators did not have much on Dewey when they started. The confidential complaints upon the investigations were authorized, contained only general suspicions bolstered by rumors.

Uncle Sam Is Watching Greenland

ITS LAND is mostly mountainous, mostly ice-covered. Most of the people live along the southern coast. They raise sheep and cattle, make their own clothes, dig their own coal. Thirty radio stations help them keep in touch with Denmark.

ITS LOCATION, and the occupation of Denmark by Germany, has raised question whether a European power may be tempted to use this Danish colony for a foothold in the western hemisphere.

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON, April 27.—News item: President Roosevelt expresses approval of people of the United States who show an interest in studying up on Greenland.

Reason: (Mostly capital concept) Greenland belongs to Denmark. The Germans take over Denmark. Greenland is in the western hemisphere. . . might be included in lands in which the United States would resist foreign invasion should the Monroe doctrine be invoked. Also some situation might develop similar to that in the Virgin Islands in 1916 when the United States told the Danes they would be mighty smart to sell them to us for $25,000,000.
 The Danes thought so, too.

Okmulgee Has More Folks Greenland, an area of 827,275 square miles, would just about fit over the state of Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, North and South Dakota . . . has a total population of 16,630, slightly less than the last official population of Okmulgee, Okla. Of these, 408 are Danes, the rest Eskimos and half breeds.
 The whole interior of Greenland is covered with ice, in some places a mile to a mile-and-a-half thick. Its western shore (the habitable area) is divided into two inspectorates. Godthaab is capital of the southern; Godhavn of the northern.

Julianshaab is its most southern town. From there it's only a seven-to-nine hour bomber flight to the coasts of Canada, northeastern United States, and Great Britain.

One of my sources says it has about 80 settlements; another says it has about 175. Take your pick.
 The Danes and a few of the Eskimo high-mucky-mucks live in wooden houses. The rest in huts.

The whole of the island (if you can call a hunk of land like that an island) has two monthly newspapers. They are printed in Greenlandish, which is outlandish Eskimo.

The summers (but don't park you park) last from April to September. Mostly, the whole summer is daylight. There are flowers then. Lots of them. . .

With some of its better glaciers running from 25 to 30 miles across, Greenland is the home of the icebergs that float down the Labrador current to worry skippers in the north Atlantic.

It's also the home of the auk, Ditto the eider (for eiderdown) ducks, seals, reindeer and snow-going jackrabbits. It also has a good share of the world's polar bears that are not in zoos.

Hunt, Fish, Pay Taxes

Its principal industries are whaling, sealing, hunting, fishing, and mining cryolite in the mines at Ivigtut. Cryolite is an almost translucent mineral, among the by-products of which is aluminum.

The prices of everything in Greenland are fixed. One-sixth of the one-sale price of all outgoing products is taken for government.
 There's no other tax.

Unalak is the most northern settlement and one of the most northern in the world. Up there, in summer, the gardens grow radishes, broccoli, lettuce and sometimes turnips. . . but no parsley.

Unlike spots I could name, Greenland admits that its weather is always uncertain. Dense fogs blot out the sunshine while your back is turned. The rainstorms are hellbenders. And the blizzards . . . well, just Arctic.

The people are kindly, jovial, honest and intelligent. Crime is so close to unknown that there's not a policeman in the land. The only drunks are sailors who come

FISHERMAN'S LUCK?

Today and Tomorrow

Scandinavian Isolationist Policy Succeeds in 1914-18, But Fails in 1940.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

LESS than a year ago—to be exact on May 11, 1939—the late Senator Borah issued a statement which needs to be reprinted today. The text in full is as follows:

"When I read of the four nations—Norway, Denmark, Finland, and Sweden—saying to Hitler, and in effect to the world, that 'we are going to be neutral and run our own business in our own way.' I cannot but believe that it will afford some comfort, and possibly some courage, to people in this country who think we cannot keep out of war, that we cannot be neutral, and that we cannot have our own national policy."

"When we think of these nations, situated as they are, revealing the foresight and the courage which they have done heretofore and which they are doing again, it ought to be helpful to us who know to the demands and policies of other nations."

"We should not have so very much trouble in outlining a safe, sound and neutral policy if it were not for the fact that we seem to be constantly concerned about what we shall do, or what we ought to do, with reference to the affairs of other nations."

"I venture to say there are some neutrality bills which never would have the slightest chance of consideration, if it were not because these neutrality bills were supposed to be of very great interest to certain other nations."
 "The real reason why these nations are successful in their effort to take care of their own interests and maintain their own policies is because they are not trying to play power politics. But the government of the United States cannot divorce itself apparently from the great desire to play power politics, to become a factor in the power politics of Europe."

Hollywood Libels a Profession

By DAMON RUNYO

WE DEMAND a new deal in housekeeping. The screen and of fiction writing, sick and tired of the old brand. They much of a type. Middle-aged women with dour expressions and ramrod back.
 They can not answer a civil question

 Their hair is always slicked head and parted dead-square in the middle, unless they are of the pompadour period, which is even worse.

Mostly the name is something like Mrs. Crimmins. As a rule they are widows, though sometimes they have a no-good husband lurking in the background, compelling them to do dirt against their will.
 Maybe the no-good is just af-

Anyhow, he is always a skunk. Damon
